

Bjarni Thor Gislason is the Head of the Data & Analytics Department at the Central Bank of Iceland. He also serves as the Digital Transformation Officer of the bank. He was the CIO of the Financial Supervisory Authority of Iceland before it merged with the Central Bank in 2020. He started his career in a business intelligence team at Landsbanki Íslands building a data warehouse and reporting solutions before moving to the Icelandic Financial Supervisory Authority 2 years after the 2008 financial crisis. He has a M.Sc. degree in Informatics from the University of Edinburgh with a major in knowledge management and learning from data.