

Andrew Geraghty is an open-source advocate who has been leading award-winning teams in large organizations for over 25 years. He loves working with multidisciplinary teams to design digital products and websites that deliver exceptional reach and user experiences.

As the Director of Digital Strategy and Services for the Bank of Canada, he reports into both the Communications and Information Technology departments. His team consists of a diverse crew of web application developers, content specialists, digital designers, videographers and communicators.

Andrew lives with his wife, their four children and a lawn tractor in Ottawa, Ontario.