Securities Issues August 2016

October 14th, 2016

Banco de Portugal publishes today, in table A.25 of the Statistical Bulletin and in BPstat, data on shares and debt securities issues for August 2016.

In August, net securities issued (gross issues minus redemptions) by residents amounted to 3.1 billion euros (Chart 1).

The instruments with biggest impact on this value were debt securities, with net issues of 2.9 billion euros, a maximum since May of 2015. This value is identically distributed between short and long term debt securities.

The general government had the highest value with net issues of 2.6 billion euros (Chart 2). For the second consecutive month in this sector, the net issues of short term debt securities were higher than those of long term securities.

In August, the outstanding amount of securities issued by residents reached 433.5 billion euros (Chart 3). The general government amount increased for the fourth consecutive month, an increase that was partially offset by the devaluation of these securities in the secondary market.
