

Decree-Law No 91/2018 of 12 November 2018

In recent years there have been significant changes in the payments market, notably as regards the growing technical complexity and volumes of electronic payments, as well as the emergence of new types of payment services with growing concerns about the risks associated with the use of electronic payments of digital means.

This Decree-Law transposes into the Portuguese legal system Directive (EU) 2015/2366 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 25 November 2015 on payment services in the internal market (second Payment Services Directive), which revised the European legal framework for payment services. The amendments it introduces seek to address the regulatory challenges posed by the dynamic reality nature of payment services, enabling new means of payment to reach a broader market, which ensure the functioning of vital economic and social activities. Also concerns related to consumer protection and safety in the use of those payment services are fundamental objectives, preserving the consumer's choice in better conditions of security, effectiveness and cost efficiency. The security of electronic payments is fundamental for ensuring the protection of users and the proper promotion of the development of e-commerce on competitive terms.

At the same time, the option remains to systematise the framework governing the provision of payment services and the framework governing the taking up, pursuit and prudential supervision of the business of electronic money institutions, taking into account the convergence of the two, with the aim of facilitating their implementation. The new Legal Framework for Payment Services and Electronic Money is thus approved, broadly relying on the approach used in the framework in place since 2012, but introducing the necessary changes to transpose the second Payment Services Directive. For this purpose, the legal framework governing the taking up of the business of payment institutions and the provision of payment services, approved by Decree-Law No 317/2009 of 30 October 2009, subsequently amended and republished as the Legal Framework for Payment Services and Electronic Money by Decree-Law No 242/2012 of 7 November 2012, is repealed.

This is also an opportunity to introduce some refinements to the aforementioned framework, which result from the need to improve and correct this legislation, taking into account the experience gained with its implementation, as well as to include matters which do not directly result from the transposition of the provisions of the second Payment Services Directive, but are not unrelated to its approach, with their inclusion thus being systematically justified. Measures for the implementation of three European regulations related to payment transactions within the Union are also introduced.

This Decree-Law is organised into eight titles, with Title I and Title VIII covering general matters, namely general and introductory provisions in Title I and ancillary, transitional and final provisions in Title VIII.

Title II deals with the taking up and general conditions of the activity of payment service providers and electronic money issuers, regulating matters relating to the authorisation and registration process, their supervision and the implementation of the so-called Community passport, notably the provision of two new types of payment services, including payment initiation services and account information services, as well as rules on access to payment systems and accounts and also on the management of operational and security risks.

Specifically, this Decree-Law specifies the categories of entities which may legitimately provide payment services and issue electronic money. The conditions for granting and maintaining authorisation for carrying out the activity of payment institutions and electronic money institutions include prudential requirements proportionate to the operational and financial risks incurred in carrying out the activity, based on the same approach used in the framework in place thus far. In the specific case of payment initiation service providers and account information service providers, when exclusively providing those services, it would be disproportionate to impose own funds requirements to the extent that they do not hold client funds. However, meeting their liabilities in relation to their activities should be ensured by imposing the need to hold professional indemnity insurance or a comparable guarantee.

Also, payment institutions and electronic money institutions continue to be prohibited from taking deposits or other repayable funds from users.

With regard to credit granting, payment institutions and electronic money institutions may only grant credit through the opening of credit lines or the issuance of credit cards, where it is strictly related to payment services. The obligations relating to the adoption of measures ensuring the segregation of client funds and own funds are maintained, as well as to the implementation of adequate internal control mechanisms in order to comply with the obligations in relation to money laundering and terrorist financing. It should also be noted that Banco de Portugal was awarded the mandate to carry out prudential and banking conduct supervision of payment institutions and electronic money institutions.

This Decree-Law also provides for a single winding-up regime applicable to all payment institutions and electronic money institutions, with a view to its simplification, by establishing that dissolution of these institutions only occurs by reason of the withdrawal of authorisation by Banco de Portugal. The application of this rule to payment institutions and electronic money institutions, the object of which is not exclusively the provision of payment services and the issuance of electronic money, simplifies their winding-up regime without undermining the core rights of most of the creditors of these undertakings, since winding-up transactions, in the strict sense, continue to comply with the Portuguese insolvency code (Código da Insolvência e da Recuperação de Empresas), which guarantees they are treated equally.

In order to enhance the transparency of the operation of payment institutions and electronic money institutions authorised by, or registered with, Banco de Portugal, including its agents, and contribute to a high level of consumer protection, this Decree-Law provides that Banco de Portugal shall make a public register available to ensure easy public access to the list of entities providing payment services and issuing electronic money.

Payment institutions and electronic money institutions having their head office in another Member State, when operating in Portuguese territory through agents, are also required to appoint a central contact point in order to ensure adequate communication and information reporting on compliance with the provisions of this Decree-Law.

It also provides for the possibility of exempting certain institutions, excluding entities wishing to provide new payment initiation, account information or money remittance services, from complying with some of the prudential rules applicable to the taking up and pursuit of the activity of providing payment services, in terms laid down in an executive order from the Minister of Finance and by meeting certain parameters. However, this exemption is without prejudice to compliance by institutions which benefit from it with any provisions on anti-money laundering and countering terrorist financing, as well as any provisions on registration, professional secrecy, the right to bring proceedings before a court and exchange of information. Also, the institutions benefiting from such exemption must have their head office in Portugal and may not benefit from the European 'passporting' rules.

Title III covers, on the one hand, pre-contractual and contractual information obligations, designed to ensure the transparency of conditions and information requirements governing payment services, and, on the other hand, the rules accommodating the rights and obligations to be complied with in the provision and use of payment services. This Decree-Law follows the same provision approach of the existing framework, but there are some aspects which are new in view of the current practice.

Thus, a number of rules are laid down specifically for the operationalisation of payments mediated by new payment initiation and account information service providers, including the rules for access to the payment account and the respective limits, to ensure that payments are made safely without undue obstacles.

For prepaid payment instruments that solely concern individual payment transactions, the maximum storage amount of funds was raised, up to which such instruments may be included in the derogation from the payment service providers' obligations relating to transparency of conditions, as well as to information requirements and the provision of payment services.

In addition, mechanisms are demandable which focus on remuneration practices applicable to the institutions' staff that deal directly with customers in the provision of payment services, or that perform management tasks, in order to guarantee consumers' rights and interests.

The legislative option provided for in the Directive of treating microenterprises as consumers is maintained, allowing those entities to benefit from the same level of protection as consumers, in particular as regards information and rules for the execution of payment transactions. However, this equivalence does not cover microenterprises that agree with their payment service provider that there is no right to a refund in case of unauthorised debit transactions, thus allowing them to access the SEPA B2B direct debit scheme. The rules on charging fees are also maintained.

Furthermore, the requirement for strong customer authentication leads to the implementation of adequate security measures to protect the confidentiality and integrity of payment service users' personalised security credentials. Payment services offered via internet or via other at-distance channels, the functioning of which does not depend on where the device used to initiate the payment transaction or the payment instrument used is physically located, should include user authentication with elements that dynamically link the transaction to a specific amount and payee, so that the user is always aware of what is being authorised.

As regards the payer's liability for unauthorised payment transactions, in order to promote the notification of the payment service provider of any theft or loss of a payment instrument and thus to reduce the risk of unauthorised payment transactions, this Decree-Law reduces the maximum amount for which the payer is liable, while also limiting the liability to the available balance or the limit on the credit line linked to the account or payment instrument, unless the payer has acted fraudulently or with gross negligence. In turn, payment service providers are not required to reimburse the payers the amount of the unauthorised payment transaction immediately if they suspect that the payer acted fraudulently and report them to the competent authorities.

Title IV deals with the specific procedures for the issuance, distribution and redemption of electronic money, in line with the framework in force since 2012. These matters are subject to a limited but important set of conduct rules, reflecting the contractual relationship between electronic money issuers and holders.

In turn, as was the case under the previous framework, Title V establishes appropriate procedures by means of which it will be possible to pursue complaints against payment service providers and to ensure that effective, proportionate and dissuasive penalties are imposed. Without prejudice to the right of customers to bring action in the courts, this Decree-Law provides for a complaint mechanism to Banco de Portugal and an alternative dispute resolution mechanism through payment service providers' and electronic money institutions' registering with at least two entities enabling alternative dispute resolution.

Title VI provides for measures for the implementation of three European regulations, namely Regulation (EC) No 924/2009 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 16 September 2009 on cross-border payments in the Community, Regulation (EU) No 260/2012 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 14 March 2012 establishing technical and business requirements for credit transfers and direct debits in euro and amending Regulation (EC) No 924/2009 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 16 September 2009, Regulation (EU) No 2015/751 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 29 April 2015 on interchange fees for card-based payment transactions.

Finally, Title VII governs the legal consequences of committing administrative offences related to the provision of payment services and the issuance of electronic money, including the level of administrative fines, additional penalties and the corresponding procedural rules, as well as the criminalisation of a breach of professional secrecy committed within the scope of this activity.

The Insurance and Pension Funds Supervisory Authority, Banco de Portugal, the Association of Specialised Credit Institutions, the Competition Authority, the National Consumption Council, the Portuguese Data Protection Authority, the Portuguese Association of Electronic Commerce and Interactive Advertising and the Portugal Fintech and Insurtech Association were heard.

Furthermore, the consultation of the Portuguese Association of Distribution Companies and the Portuguese Association of Users and Consumers of Financial Products and Services was also promoted.

Therefore:

3 – Where a payment service user denies having authorised an executed payment transaction, the use of a payment instrument recorded by the payment service provider, including the payment initiation service provider as appropriate, shall in itself not necessarily be sufficient to prove either that the payment transaction was authorised by the payer or that the payer acted fraudulently or failed with intent or gross negligence to fulfil one or more of the obligations under Article 110.

4 – In the cases referred to in the foregoing paragraph, the payment service provider, including, where appropriate, the payment initiation service provider, shall provide supporting evidence to prove fraud, intent or gross negligence on part of the payment service user.

ANNEX

(referred to in Articles 51 and 57)

Calculation of own funds

1 – The calculation of own funds requirements referred to in Articles 51 and 57 of the Legal Framework for Payment Services and Electronic Money shall be carried out in accordance with one of the methods described in this Annex.

A. Fixed overheads method

The payment institution's own funds shall amount to at least 10% of its fixed overheads of the preceding year. Banco de Portugal may adjust that requirement in the event of a material change in a payment institution's business since the preceding year. Where a payment institution has not completed a full year's business at the date of the calculation, the requirement shall be that its own funds amount to at least 10% of the corresponding fixed overheads as projected in its business plan, unless an adjustment to that plan is required by the competent authorities.

B. Payment volume method

The payment institution's own funds shall amount to at least the sum of the following elements multiplied by the scaling factor k defined in paragraph 2, where payment volume (PV) represents one twelfth of the total amount of payment transactions executed by the payment institution in the preceding year:

- (a) 4.0% of the slice of PV up to €5 million; plus
- (b) 2.5% of the slice of PV above €5 million up to €10 million; plus
- (c) 1% of the slice of PV above €10 million up to €100 million; plus
- (d) 0.5% of the slice of PV above €100 million up to €250 million; plus
- (e) 0.25% of the slice of PV above €250 million.

C. Relevant indicator method

The payment institution's own funds shall amount to at least the relevant indicator defined in subparagraph (a), multiplied by the multiplication factor defined in subparagraph (b) and by the scaling factor k defined in paragraph 2.

(a) The relevant indicator is the sum of the following:

- (i) interest income;
- (ii) interest expenses;
- (iii) commissions and fees received; and
- (iv) other operating income.

Each element shall be included in the sum with its positive or negative sign. Income from extraordinary or irregular items shall not be used in the calculation of the relevant indicator.

Expenditure on the outsourcing of services rendered by third parties may reduce the relevant indicator if the expenditure is incurred from an undertaking subject to supervision under this Legal Framework. The relevant indicator is calculated on the basis of the 12-monthly observation at the end of the previous financial year. The relevant indicator shall be calculated over the previous financial year. Nevertheless own funds calculated according to Method C shall not fall below 80% of the average of the previous three financial years for the relevant indicator. When audited figures are not available, business estimates may be used.

The multiplication factor shall be:

- (i) 10% of the slice of the relevant indicator up to €2.5 million;
- (ii) 8% of the slice of the relevant indicator from €2.5 million up to 5 million;
- (iii) 6% of the slice of the relevant indicator from €5 million up to €25 million;
- (iv) 3% of the slice of the relevant indicator from €25 million up to €50 million;
- (v) 1.5% of the slice of the relevant indicator above €50 million.

The scaling factor k to be used in Methods B and C shall be:

- (a) 0.5 where the payment institution provides only the payment service as referred to Article 4(f) of the Legal Framework for Payment Services and Electronic Money;
- (b) 1 where the payment institution provides any of the payment services as referred to in Article 4(a) to (e) of the Legal Framework for Payment Services and Electronic Money.

2 – Banco de Portugal may, based on an evaluation of the risk-management processes, risk loss data base and internal control mechanisms of the payment institution, require the payment institution to hold an amount of own funds which is up to 20% higher than the amount which would result from the application of the method chosen in accordance with paragraph 1, or permit the payment institution to hold an amount of own funds which is up to 20% lower than the amount which would result from the application of the method chosen in accordance with paragraph 1.
